Description

I want to enable comments on wiki pages.

I have two options right now, both have advantages and disadvantages.

Enabling comments on pages

* Pros

o Easy to configure

o Comments are visible directly on the page

* Cons

o No way for people to monitor all posts on the site. Often people post a comment on a a page and never get feedback.

Associating a discussion forum thread to each page

* Pros

o Everyone on the site gets to see every posting that's made on any page. Increases the likelihood that someone will respond to a post.

* Cons

o More difficult to configure.

o Postings are not visible directly on the page.

It would be nice if we could have the best of both.

What I would like is something where:

- A discussion forum for the wiki can be enabled at a single click of the mouse.
- This single click of mouse would result in threads being a utomatically created on this mailing list for each of the wiki pages

- The top 5 messages for a given page would be displayed directly on that page.

Solution

I fixed the link to activate the feature.

Tried on two instances, with and without tabs - all fine for me, sorry.
