Related-to

- Wiki text returned from plugin not parsed

Description

The attached file updates the SQL wiki plugin so that the user has a choice whether the returned data should be Wiki parsed or not instead of just preventing it. Parsing is the default with "noparse=>1" preventing the parsing. There are also two additional features added to the code:

1. "raw=>1" will eliminate any headers or formatting.
2. "delim=>|" will set the data delimiter for columns to being an "or" bar. Any other separator can be used.

These additional features are useful when selecting summary data like "count(*)" and resultant headers are unwanted or when selecting data normally, but wanting to format the output aside from the standard SQL return.

There is a remaining issue with the submitted patch. While I have updated the help array at the top I don't know how to make the new parameters reflected in the GUI help system as seen by the user when accessing the plugin through the help system.

I will update the SQL plugin documentation on the Tiki site if this patch is accepted. Doing so before-hand will only set false expectations for functionality not yet there.
