Description

Currently, marking "Restrict non admins to wiki page access only " on a tracker breaks the TrackerCalendar plugin. Clicking a calendar item with the before mentioned option set in the tracker brings forward a screen saying that the user must be an admin. This is the conflict bug portion of this request.

The feature I am requesting will remedy the above mentioned bug. I am requesting a feature of making "read only" views of the calendar entry available for use after the calendar date item is clicked. This can be achieved through the addition of a "url" field in the TrackerCalendar plugin parameters that permits jumping to any link when the calendar date item is clicked. This feature would allow for linking to another wiki page that has a "TrackerList" plugin on it to show the related data, possibly through a pretty tracker.

I am attaching updated wikiplugin_trackercalendar.php and trackercalendar.tpl files that work to implement the feature/fix solution. I'm not checking them in because my javascript skills aren't what I would like them to be and I'm sure this provided solution can be improved upon with better use of the javascript fullCalendar event.url element. Feel free to reach out if I can provide any assitance or insights.

I gave "easy to solve" a score of siz as an average. It is a "1" for me or I would have done it, it might be "9" for someone who clearly understands javascript.
