Description

There was an issue with the LDAP not syncing groups properly, and would thus cause a blank page to appear when logging into my site.

Essentially, the entire problem is attributed to a typo in the function name for the `ldap_sync_groups` function. The file `~/lib/userslib.php` contains the function:

```
private function _ldap_sync_groups($user, $pass)

The major problem is that this function name has a leading underscore (`_`) and causes an issue when it attempts to sync the groups with the LDAP.

Simply removing the underscore solves the whole problem. The function should be named as such:

```
private function ldap_sync_groups($user, $pass)
{...}
```

This will make it so that when the file reaches the line:

```
$ret &= $this->ldap_sync_groups($user, $pass);
```

It can successfully sync with the LDAP.

Solution

Apply the mentioned correction, albeit I had at least 2 places to change, not just the 1 mentioned here, so further occurrences should be checked.

can you please commit the fix yourself? (you will probably have your own setup to test your fix, etc.)

See <https://dev.tiki.org/Commit>

Thanks and welcome to the Tiki Community! (ask commit access on irc - see <https://tiki.org/Irc>)

I'm looking for php-experts in my company for the coding, will cover this when the time comes. ;-)

However, the point of my comment was to have a look at further places where such "typo"(?) happend.

I don't know the code well enough to judge what's better to correct, remove the extra "_" or add it everywhere else where it's missing, and where all those adjustments have to be made or what side effects it might have to fix it here but break elsewhere.

Should be fixed for latest 12.x, 15.x, 16.x, 17.x and trunk (future 18.x). Please retest with Daily build for your version: <https://dev.tiki.org/Daily+Build> to confirm
