Description
Polom, fantastic team,

I thought it would be useful to report this malfunction that I already mentioned in IRC and haven't yet found a solution for.

When inserting C++ code snippets using the {CODE()} plugin, many of the listed color schemes listed as available from CodeMirror do not work properly if not at all in wiki. I should be using 'clike' (c-like) for C++ code, but it leaves the code bits completely un-coloured.

For now I'm using the 'tiki' color scheme because it does apply some colors to my code, but those are not C compliant.

Here's an example snippet :

1. include <utility>

Message::Message()

m_number = 0;

}

```
Message::~Message()
{
}

Message::Message(const Message &x)
{
m_owner = x.m_owner;
m_number = x.m_number;
m_dest = x.m_dest;
}
```

Thanks in advance if you have any suggestion,

Regards,

Nick

Looks like we're missing some way of specifying parameters for this one, according to https://codemirror.net/mode/clike/index.html
We need to give it a `keywords` param containing the keywords in the language apparently. Wonder where that should come from? I guess it's different for each language...
