The hard part about troubleshooting this is that the dropdown disappears as soon as the browser DOM inspector is activated, at least for me and Firefox. So it's hard to know what CSS is being used or should be used.

Hi Gary, I believe there are some tricks you can use to display the Chosen dropdown in the inspector... like forcing display: block or something? Or debugging with pause on breakpoints?

Update: here is some guide on how to do it with Chrome:

<https://developers.google.com/web/tools/chrome-devtools/javascript/breakpoints>

Update 2: you could also simply remove the `left: -9000px` rule on `.chosen-container .chosen-drop` in the code inspector

Fix in <https://sourceforge.net/p/tikiwiki/code/68313/>

Thanks, it tweaked the position of the images but they should be actually replaced with the icons we have in the view mode (green filled dot, orange half-filled dot, and the grey one for closed)

@Benoit: like you did for <https://dev.tiki.org/item6893-Status-icon-in-tracker-edit-broken>

Please note this is in the legacy UI option for having the edit form in tab like on this site as opposed to the modal edit dialog.

<https://sourceforge.net/p/tikiwiki/code/68351/>

should be better now

Super! Thanks!
