Description
Add a new pref on the login control panel, similar to Password expires after, to set a number of days after which users that have not logged in require admin validation before they can log in again.

This is to automatically weed out users that may have left a third party company, without the Tiki owner knowing about it, and needing to prevent those users accessing sensitive data (for instance after moving to a competitor company).

I got a similar request a while back and it lead to a pref to revalidate email after x days.

If they changed employer, they no longer have access to that email. And thus, they are locked out of Tiki.

You just need to check they don't change their email to new employer. Maybe a report or alert on email changes?
