Description

How about a true staging capability for TikiWiki?

That would include that all content can be scheduled. In essence, whether we are talking a wiki page, an article, etc, everything would have an validity interval attached. INSIDE that interval, edits can be made and versions are kept, but each of the entities (like a wiki page) would have siblings that are valid for a specific timeframe.

I know that would mean some work, but it would make using Tiki for business websites so much more convenient.

Solution

The new wiki page staging and approval feature should take care of this. Yes?
