Category transitions can only be defined from ONE category to ANOTHER category. It is just as valid to have a transition from NO category to A category. This is not possible at the moment.

Example: Defining a workflow for wiki pages via category transitions. Once a wiki page is in one of the workflow categories, transitions can be triggered via the category transition module. But it is not possible to use the same module to insert a wiki page into the workflow. One has to select one of the workflow-categories from the categories tab while editing the page. This is bad UX as it doesn't make sense to the end user why there are two different ways of interacting with the workflow, especially since the workflow categories should ideally not be selectable from the categories tab at all.

Additionally it would also make sense to be able to remove a wiki page from the workflow, i.e. defining a transition that removes the FROM category without adding another category.

Hi amette

I have a site where a few 10s of thousands of tracker items have been mis-categorised and am trying to work out how to fix it, but had forgotten about category transitions... so this might be handy for me too (it's relatively low priority at the moment but will need fixing one day, so don't hold your breath! ;)
