Description
I have managed to create a horizontal menu (cf. the bug that menu creation on Tiki 18.8 is impossible) by directly manipulating it's table in the database.

While that has worked, in principle, I do have a layout problem: I want to have, aside from the text, one of the options with a logo. So I created at tiny PNG in the height of the text in the (horizontal) menu, but I cannot adjust the height (vertical position) of this tiny image in relation to the vertical position of the adjacent text. How can I shift either the graphics (currently via img plugin) or the text vertically so that image and text are nicely "in line"?

Ideal would be the vertical center, but if that isn't possible, top or bottom could also do.

I hesitate to render all menu items as solid graphics. From a graphics designer's point of view that would ease things, but slow down initial page load, and/or display nasty ALT text until loading/caching has finished.

Thanks
hman

Same comment as in the carousel centering report: How shall I mark this? In this case, it's clearly not a bug (contrary to carousel centering).

Same answer as in the carousel ?

However I think you are mixing 2 things;
Reporting a bug (something that should work but is not) on the "bug" tracker
Asking for help (something you fail to do). For this, you should do using the forum.

Maybe I would use the forum more often it questions asked there would actually get answers (I do have a couple of questions opened there...)...
