Description

i have a problem with categorization.
when i add a new article. an old article in the tiki_categorized_objects got overwritten.
the objid and the href gets the new article id.
the result is that the old article losses its cat and the new article has the both.

when i take out the update in the method:
approve_submission
all is fine again:

catelib.php:

function approve_submission($subId, $articleId) {
$query = "update `tiki_categorized_objects` set `type`= ?, `objId`= ?, `href`=? where `objId` = ?";
//$this->query($query, array('article', (int)$articleId, "tiki-read_article.php?articleId=$articleId", (int)$subId));

what i find strange is the $subid at the end.

i'm not sure what the method is for. probably i broke something else.

i must add. i added a the category right in the database.
i added the articles by hand to the tiki_categorzed_objects and added the category by using the topics from the article's.

Solution

Bug fix: approved articles inherit only the categorization of the submission, not of other objects that happen to share an ID with the submission <- Fixed by Laurent Moss on May 10th 2007, and will be in Tiki 1.9.8
