Description

In clean installs of both 1.9.7 and 1.10 I found that the email address entered in Tiki-Admin:General (Sender email) is reflected in Tiki-Contact the format user(AT)address(DOT)com. Example: the doc pages lead to the example at: <http://security.tikiwiki.org/tiki-contact.php> where the email address is also shown as: "click here to send us an email: security(AT)tikiwiki(DOT)org". All of my email clients parse this to an address of: AT DOT <securitytikiwikiorg>, which obviously does not work. I have viewed my pages on several different Linux and WinXP machines, all with the same results.

If have not gotten far enough in my setup to see if this "problem" surfaces elsewhere.

As I have not seen a bug report, nor other question on this issue I wonder if I am doing something wrong.

Thank you for for this fantastic project!

Nope, you did nothing wrong i believe. The format user(AT)address(DOT)com was intended as an anti-spam obfuscation but obviously common parenthesis shouldn't be used because it seems in parenthesis actual e-mail address can occur after real name. better solution would be e.g. userATaddressDOTcom and the best if admin could specify the format him/herself.

As per Tiki23 (tested on linux) seems everything is ok with the mail address and the link initiate a mail sending. Please retest with a recent version of Tiki. If you still have an issue create a new ticket.
