Description

It's very easy to add manually by editing templates/footer.tpl, it would be nicer to have the _uacct saved in the database with the rest of the settings. Upgrades would be easier for site admins.

Please see:

<https://www.google.com/support/analytics/bin/answer.py?answer=55488>

This would be similar to gmap.

Maybe this feature request could be even more generic to include easy ways to add other services and/or make it easy to use with open source apps like phpOpenTracker or phpMyVisites.

<http://www.phpmyvisites.us> also recommends putting the code just before /body>

Also, there should be a way to exclude certain or all groups from tracking. If I use 1 Tiki for a public website and an Intranet, I don't want my Intranet traffic to pollute my public site stats. I could just want anonymous users to be tracked.

Also, let's integrate more tightly with the new ga.js code so we can track downloaded files, and take advantage of other nice stats.

I like the idea of making this more generic. How about doing something similar to the Site Identity feature here? You could have a free-form text area in which to add code that gets put into header.tpl?

This is basically some data just before

Something generic to customize header.tpl is better.
