Description
If a wiki page is included in a structure, Tiki lists the page when viewing the structure (or when listing TOC) — even if the user does not have permission (tiki_p_view) to actually view the page. This presents an invalid structure to the user — they are seeing pages that they do not have permission to view. Tiki should only show pages (in a structure) that you can actually view.

Alternative implementation (proposed by luciash):
To have an option "restricted pages in this structure will be omitted from the list" or "will be shown but marked as restricted"

Confirmed in 1.9.8 and 1.10.1

I would like the alternative implementation proposed by luciash, because it gives the possibility e.g. to show anonymous the whole content of your site, but grant only registered to use it all.

I noticed in 6.1 that my module showing a structure only showed the pages anonymous could see, so this is at least partially fixed.

I think this should be the default behavior, as it conforms to WYSIWYCA.

Although, perhaps the reason for this was that I had only given Can watch structure (tiki_p_watch_structure) permission to registered users.
