Description

The calendar should be in the category system.

Would each calendarID be assignable to a category?

Would each event be assignable to a category?

Clarification: Calendars and Calendar Events should be categorisable.

Each calendar ID should be in Category system for project management purposes.

But what happens then to "aggregated" calendars?

Ex: in project management,

Usually project sub-committee calendar = General project calendar + specific sub committee calendar.
This aggregated calendar would be assigned to sub-committee category...

Marc, can this item be closed? It is coded for 1.10, afaik

I understand the feature request as follow;
It should be possible to categorise Calendars and Calendar Events

As per Tiki23 only calendars can be assigned to a category.
However it is possible to use Tracker Calendar to achieve this.

Right, so events would inherit category from parent calendar but there could be an override. Very much like blogs and blog posts.

This can be used for filtering, permissions, etc.

I think the back-end stuff is all done, we just need to add the category picker to the edit calendar item form i think... the permissions inheriting from the parent calendar perms arrived in 7b963065 .

Odd, i thought calendar items had the category picker on them at one point, maybe that fell off during the switch to full-calendar.

Indeed, tiki-edit_categories.php offers calendar items
