Description

Auto-eMail is generated to subscriber using template confirm_newsletter_subscription.tpl which contains the following:

In order to confirm your subscription you must access the following URL:
`{ $url_subscribe }?confirm_subscription={ $code }`

However, the url_subscribe truncates the php extension in the pagename shown in the email sent to subscriber as follows: tiki-newsletters.ph?confirm_subscription=someString, rather than tiki-newsletters.php?confirm_subscription=someString

Newsletter is generated to all subscribers containing unsubscribe message generated using template newsletter_unsubscribe.tpl which contains the following:

You can unsubscribe from this newsletter following this link:

`href="{ $url_unsub }">{ $url_unsub }`

But, the newsletter shows a truncated php extension in the pagename of the url_unsub as follows:

tiki-newsletters.ph?unsubscribe=someString, rather than tiki-newsletter.php?unsubscribe=someString

Solution

May have something to do with variables called and passed from nllib.php. I do not have the php scripting and smarty skills to determine solution.

I did not fix this. I merely forced this to work. A better solution is needed.

1. This forces correction of the "unsubscribe" link included with each dispatched newsletter email.

In /lib/newsletters/nllib.php

Find function get_unsub_msg

Find this line in the function and insert a "p" where shown:

$url_unsub = $url_subscribe . 'p?unsubscribe=' . $code;

2. This forces correction of the "subscription confirmation" link included when someone subscribes to a newsletter and "confirm email" is set true.

In /templates/mail/confirm_newsletter_subscription.tpl

Insert a "p" in the last line as follows:

{ $url_subscribe }p?confirm_subscription={ $code }

I don't have a 1.9 TW available, but I understand that nuzzy's hack makes the issue disappear, and 1.9 is not in development anymore, so a better solution will not appear (no big developments, just small bugfixes).

I can't reproduce this problem in 2.0 or trunk, so it seems to work fine without nuzzy's hack. Nothing more needs to be done.
