Description

I have been trying all weekend to get a menu item to be visible and active for an anonymous user.
The uri is elkstudy.com.

There are four items in the menu. Here is the .csv:

"optionId","type","name","url","position","section","perm","groupname","userlevel","remove"
203,"o","Home","tiki-index.php",2,"","",,"Anonymous",0,"n"
205,"s","About EMG","",3,"","",,"Anonymous",0,"n"
208,"o","Introduction","tiki-index.php?page=Introduction",4,"","",,"Anonymous",0,"n"
207,"o","Purpose","tiki-index.php?page=emgPurpose",5,"","",,"Anonymous",0,"n"
204,"s","FAQs","tiki-list_faqs.php",8,"feature_faqs","tiki_p_view_faqs, tiki_p_suggest_faq,tiki_p_view","Anonymous",0,"n" 206,"s","News","tiki-view_articles.php",10,"feature_articles","tiki_p_read_article, tiki_p_topic_read","Anonymous",0,"n"

I made FAQs work only by pointing to a Wiki page, which is OK.

But I cannot get the item to be visible either for anonymous or registered users (only admin) so that anyone can get to the articles section, which I want to be a news section.

I have looked into a theme problem (same issue with any of a dozen themes) I'm using a variant of absE.

I have tried plain menus

and the three variations on the PHPLayers (fixed, etc.)

I have tried a simple flat arrangement (all section0).

I have tried attaching a public category to all menu items.

I have spend this weekend chasing around for a solution but I haven't found one.

I would prefer to link to the FAQs module instead of building Wiki pages, but I couldn't get that to work either.
Thanks

Solution

I have not been able to find a workaround.

I created a menu with only "option" type entries, and it also shows no content to Anonymous users.

The HTML code does not contain the menu options, so CSS has nothing to manipulate.

Selecting the empty group for each menu item allows it to be visible to Anonymous. A menu item with all groups selected (including Anonymous) is NOT visible to anonymous users.
