Description

I have a very strange experience today. I tried to access the "Categories" page from three separate browsers: Google Chrome 0.2, Internet Explorer 7, and Firefox 3.0.3. I receive a "cannot be displayed" in all three browsers, even though (a) the relevant file (/tiki-admin_categories.php) is on the server, in the correct location (i.e., the root directory), and (b) has not been changed since I loaded TikiWiki onto the server, so there would not be any custom code that causes interference with the base functionality.

In Firefox, the browser attempts to download the tiki-admin_categories.php file as if it is an external object, eg a PDF.

Can anyone shed some light on how I might go about resolving this issue? It is a very strange one!

Hi,

Could be...Try change memory limit to something bigger like 32M

You can use .htaccess to increase php memory size. Use:

```
php_value memory_limit 32M
