While experiencing the same issue I was able to track it somehow down to "function.query.php".

It seems to be the anchor "#form" in the "href" of "comment-footer.tpl" that causes the resulting link to lose its heading part.

As a workaround I deleted the lines (148-152) of "function.query.php" and removed the part

"if ( empty($params'_anchor') )" from line 141 so that it now looks like

" } else {

This eliminated the special short handling of anchors. But I am not deep enough in Tiki matters to foresee if this will bring any undesirable side effects.

This has been fixed in branch 3 and will be in the 3.2 release, I believe.
