Description
     In a bilingual English/French site built on Tiki 5.x, i18n was used to create direct article-to-article links between translation versions of the same article.

     When viewing a paginated article with an associated translation, selecting the "switch language" link properly loads the appropriate language version of the article ONLY from the first page of the article.

     If an article is broken into multiple pages, attempting to switch language fails when "switch language" is selected while viewing a subpage of the article.

     Looks to me as if the pagination (&page=x) variable has not been accounted for when dealing with translations of articles.

     Please contact me at dkennedy at pondstone.ca if more information is needed.

     Thank you!
