Description
        Regarding:
        http://doc.tiki.org/Clean+URLs

        The documentation linked above states (my emphasis added):

        "Search engine friendly url Postfilter - To generate SEFURLs for all Tiki links, also check the second checkbox which creates short URLs by filtering the output. The SEFURL Postfilter consumes more processor (CPU) time than the non-filter version (it deals with all the text and it deals also with cached text like modules while the 'on the fly' filter does not do it. In future versions the SEFURL Postfilter will not be used - it is only necessary until the template SEFURL work is finished. Either one or both features (SEFURL and SEFURL Postfilter) may be used.

        I had both checked. This worked when I was on 4.x, and started failing when I moved to 5.0. This is why I marked it as a regression. The problem still exists in 5.3.

        Each now works OK separately, but the they no longer work together. I've disabled the postfilter.

        Is the postfilter no longer necessary, or am I no longer generating sefurls for all links? Priority of 3 based on the assumption that the postfilter is still necessary, otherwise I would have set it to 1.
