Description

Noob here enjoying the site, enjoying the software and finding my way around. Thank you.

It means spending a lot of time at the Tiki sites.

I get the message already about the dogfood. Cool.

But every day, every page load, I must dismiss this notice to uncover what is underneath. Or scroll the viewport out from under it.

It is located on top of the navigation.

Can we not have it fixed in the page above the navigation, or permanently dismissable once logged in, or ...?

Can we just use the site now, and stop swatting at the javascript? 🤪

I'm just setting up svn etc now. And wouldn't have the balls to make such a visible change right off the hop anyway. It's not real important obviously. But if somebody is there and knows and can do, it would make surfing the sites more pleasant...

Cheers!!

Solution

1. Moved to center column to avoid covering modules.
2. Uses cookie to close only once.

Gratuitously fixed in under a week.

Nice. Thank you. Much better.

A response like that inspires confidence.

Now please write my app for me and send the cheque after the site has made it's first million...
