Description

Visit these pages to see for yourself:
http://info.tikiwiki.org/Hosting (6.x)
http://profiles.tikiwiki.org/Profiles_in_installer (9.x)
http://dev.tikiwiki.org/Tiki13 (12.x)

It should be a redirect 301. And needs to work for 6.x, 9.x and 12.x

This worked when the feature was introduced so some other fix / enhancement must have broken it.

This is especially not good because in this version the canonical link is just relative and thus, we have two canonicals for same page...

If you go to front page, it redirects OK
http://info.tikiwiki.org (6.x)
http://profiles.tikiwiki.org (9.x)
http://dev.tikiwiki.org (12.x)

Hi changi!

Looks like we need you for this.

Tiki code is OK in our tests, but it's something related to the server which is the issue:

Thanks!

With FireFox 29, I just can't get

http://info.tikiwiki.org/tiki-read_article.php?articleId=100&todate=13 81982400

as it systematically reverts to

http://info.tiki.org/tiki-read_article.php?articleId=100&todate=13819
82400

By hand on command line, meaning this does not depend on the browser, I get a redirect. The only thing I notice is, it is a 302 redirect, not a 301 one 🙁

Looking ar the nginx config, the info.two → info.to conversion seems to be handled directly by nginx, meaning the queries for info.tikiwiki.org get converted to info.tiki.org before they even reach the Tiki instance.
Which means the Tiki redirect is probably not triggered at all.
