Description

The idea is a basic DB management panel from within the Admin.

Same stuff exist for Wordpress and they come very handy to perform maintenance task and even auto-maintenance task.

Should do:

- Green checklist (db exist, db version, host, path to backup folder, last backup, etc)
- Table list (name, number records, data usage, etc)
- Optimise/Repair (one by one, all)
- Backup DB (manual, auto, where folder, email... maybe dropbox ?, duplicating ?)
- Restore DB (folder listing, delete old, same as original, different name same user/pass)
- An option page (path to backup folder, etc)

I believe there is also some stuff we can add if we look for a wider "maintenance panel".

As we'll have a scheduling system, we can have automatic backup + optimise tables + optimise search index + flush caches, etc.

As long as we don't introduce danger (like get the system stuck waiting for a question) would be great for Tiki to perform better.

Wordpress has something very similar: <http://wordpress.org/plugins/wp-dbmanager/screenshots/>

After brainstorming, it was also suggested that maybe packaging Adminer would be a potential way to accomplish this feature request

Solution

We have something coming in with the Tiki Manager <https://dev.tiki.org/Manager> (was TRIM)
