Description

Uploading any non image into the file gallery with the upload image button in the WYSIWYG editor works fine. But when selecting that file to put in the site, TikiWiki incorrectly specifies that the file is an image. This results in the webpage with "File is not an image".

My php is 5.3 and fileinfo extention is set up correctly. I can correctly display the file by switching to Wiki text mode and changing the designation from "img" to "file"

OK, before anyone calls me stupid, the button does say "Choose or Upload Images" There is no button for choosing and uploading files, but I assume that since the "File Gallery" and not the "Image Gallery" is being called up, it should be able to handle both. If not, then I guess someone needs to add a button to CKEditor.

I created a show-me instance to show the problem in the current branch. However, this version has the option to add more buttons to the WYSIWYG. There is a file button that solves this problem. But this is a major hassel for me in the 11.1 branch. Any way I can get the file button in version 11?

Solution

The solution is to manually go to /tiki-admin_toolbars.php and add the file button. This should really be in there by default.

Workaround

As mentioned above, I can flip the site into Wiki text mode, then change "img" to "file"

WYSIWYG has no dialog box or means to handle these files.

When I flip back to WYSIWYG mode, I can double click on the file and bring up a file dialog box, but there is no way to call that box to insert a file in the first place.

thank you for the bug report. You are right, the File button should be added back to the editor for this to work properly.

The defaults are supposed to be too limited to actually use, we ended up with 4 or 5 large rows of tools when everyone added their favourites, so these got trimmed back a lot in Tiki 10 or 11. Just add the files plugin where you need it using admin/toolbars - sadly the doc page doesn't seem to be very complete or up to date, please update it if you can, and do come and find us on IRC if you need help!

Thanks for the report though 😊

Another little known (and no doubt under documented) feature that could help with this is that (since Tiki 9 or so) you can define the default syntax inserted into wiki pages from a file gallery by editing each gallery.

It's labelled:

- Wiki markup to enter when image selected from "file gallery manager"

and it sounds like you need something like

- {files fileId="%fileId%"}

on your non-image filegals maybe?

Thanks Jonny for the explanation.

I didn't know that it was removed. You are right that the default editor did get trimmed. It makes sense becuse you are right when you said that the editor was getting a little too big with buttons.

Ideally we will have to do a better job at documenting this not only in Doc but also within Tiki directly.
