- 15.x regression: autotoc non-optionally wastes vertical space below the box

Description
dev.t.o 13.x: add some scrollbar at the top of wide tables in Bootstrapped themes, since they look as with less content for new users or unexperienced visitors

Example: see for instance http://dev.tiki.org/tiki-tracker_view_history.php?itemId=5162

Column related to new content is not shown, and there is no clear indication that some more content is hidden in the right-hand side of that table.

Here's a link to a possible solution:

Ok, but I get lost in the css code/definitions... so +1 to get some html+css expert (= not me) to implement it, either by hand in our less files (again, foreign language to me) or with any of the jq plugins:

- https://github.com/sniku/jQuery-doubleScroll
- https://github.com/avianey/jqDoubleScroll
- ...

And thanks for your feedback, Gary, by the way! 😊

It does not require jQuery-UI and the original author of the previous one did work on it too. +have a compatible license (MIT)

Would adding some inner shadow on the right edge help to emphasize the fact there is content hiding and continuing behind the edge?

yes, both things would be useful. The shadow (as in http://jsfiddle.net/joshnh/QYBT7/), and the horizontal bar at the top to ease the task to scroll to the right with no-handheld-or-touchscreen devices such as traditional computers with a mouse.

Not sure I did it in correct file (tabs-and-tables...less).
See 52624

Probably will need some way (jQuery) to compute and indicate if the table inside is overflowing the .table-responsive container or not to apply a special class (to make more sense).

Probably will need a reverse variant for RTL too.

Something like

[dir=rtl] .table-responsive {
  box-shadow: 5rem 0 9rem -9rem rgba(0, 0, 0, 0.75) inset;

Please feel free to improve.

fixed in 20.x, at least, afaik.
