Description

Would we nice if we pushed a little bit in Group Tracker usability.

At the moment I see it as nothing different as a tracker itself. When there is a group tracker set in a group, when you join the group, nothing happens.

My suggestion is to make it to when you ask to join a group, you first are asked to fill in the group tracker, and than you join the group. To make it an obrigatory step in joining a group. (At the moment you can join the group and than fill the tracker, but that allow someone to join and not fill in the tracker) I was thinking of also make use of the Plugin Tracker Item Field, to check if the user have already filled in the tracker, so it can join the group. But that also allow a user to fill the tracker and not join the group. Anyway, I think there might be a way to bind these two things.

A little more would be to make an approval workflow to the admin see the tracker item of the applicant to the group, and inside it approve or not the user in the group. To use it as an application form.

Thanks Tikiers

Fernando

Thanks Fernando, good idea. In fact, that should be the case. If it's not, it looks as if some code is missing for that expected behavior. So thanks for raising this usability issue.

No problem Xavi! I was trying to make something using the "Plugin Tracker Item Field" to detect if there was a tracker item, otherwise prompt the user to create one (But this feature is not working at the moment), and make a tracker list to show new tracker items based on status. Needed to add something like an action, to add the person to the group (not sure how to do that).

That way, we could achieve something without the need of much code. What you think?

Thanks
