Description
This bug occurs when using multiple workspaces, where each have a perspective with a category Jail.

Consider each workspace to have a main file folder (that belongs to it`s main category, and is only acessed by a certain group when it enters the workspace).
If you upload a file with the normal way, it will acquire the category by the autocategoriation pref.
But if you use the drag and drop feature, it will have no category, and will become invisible to the users, even if is inside the main group folder (because it has no category, and the category jail pref is on)

One thing that should work, without the categoriation, was to use the "Category Jail Root", that should make visible what is not in the root category (If the file has no category, it should enter in that way). But that didn`t work either. Continues to show nothing.

Even if that worked, that could be an issue, because you could not set permissions right, by not having a category set.
