Description

Noticed some odd behavior today with the email that users receive for reports. If the user has the option: receive a report even when nothing has happened enabled, sometimes the link at the end of the email that is supposed to redirect to user watch preferences is broken. This only occurs when the email is reporting that no changes have been made.

For example, if the report has changes included the email is:

Report on wiki for User

Last report sent on Monday June 27, 2016

Changes in detail:

(Changes)

You are receiving notification emails grouped in a periodic digest. To receive them individually when posted instead, change your preferences at https://wikiurl/tiki-user_watches.php

That last bit is what seems to be inconsistent. If no changes have been made the email instead looks like (notice the link at the end).

Report on wiki for user

Last report sent on Monday June 27, 2016

Changes in detail:

Nothing has happened

You are receiving notification emails grouped in a periodic digest. To receive them individually when posted instead, change your preferences at http:///tiki-user_watches.php

So, if nothing has happened to report the link to the user watch preferences is replaced with `///tiki-user_watches.php`, which is obviously a broken link. Also worth noting for anyone trying to debug, the URL begins with `https://` when there are changes to report and `http://` when there are no changes to report.
