Description

If you are using user tracker information, when you delete a user there is a new feature that ask you if you want to delete the user items in trackers and it displays a list of trackers.

"Delete user items from these trackers Warning: Experimental "

It shows the tracker used to store the user information giving the "wrong" impression that you are able to control if the user information will be deleted or saved.

The text is a bit confusing but no matter if you select a tracker or you don't select it, user item in the tracker used to store the user information will be deleted.

Admin should be able to deactivate this option and it should not be set by default (erasing data cannot be default) as they are case you want to delete users but not the item created at their registration as it can lead to disrupt data cohesion on different area of your website (especially if you use on trackers and other created items relies on the user information data).

HI Bernard

I added this to delete extra tracker items like maps etc on Cartograf, added (and owned) by users. The usual "User Tracker" items were always deleted automatically before i added this extra option so i didn't change that. There is a note under it reading:

N.B. "User" and "Group" tracker items are deleted automatically without this option

Adding an override to the deletion of User Tracker info (as opposed to other items with an "wonder" field) would be a new feature request i think.

Please improve the documentation and that "N.B." on this if you can (but preferably without adding another huge remarks box making the interface unusable, as seems to be the fashion these days! 😊)

Thanks, sorry to cause confusion...
