Description

TRIM: allow editing instance information. BEfore that, allow a way to view the contents of an instance, since we may have duplicates, or several accesses to the same server, or a site migrated to a new server, etc. and it's difficult to know what to delete (if any), or edit, if possible, to keep the backups consistant and everything tidy.

There is a way to edit via the web interface, if activated. Is this sufficient?

Mmmm, not as-is, in any case. TRIM works well under ubuntu also in general, but enablewww produces ugly messages (since it's expecting paths as in clearos, in something as simple as searching for apache httpd.conf equivalent in debian-like distro's, which is called "apache2.conf" and not httpd.conf), therefore I distrusted running that command in my ubuntu machine (I don't want my apache conf files screwed up for this non-critical and non-urgent test)

Perhaps Adminer or Adminer Editor ?
