Description
  The WYSIWYG editor supports tables whether the content is stored as HTML or as Tiki/wiki syntax. However, Tiki syntax only supports basic tables. CKeditor offers advanced operations on tables via secondary click -> Cell, such as merging, splitting, and probably everything in Cell Properties.

  The result of advanced operations will generally be lost. In a few cases, these operations will properly carry to wiki format after conversion.
  After advanced operations, the issue will be noted either after saving, or simply by switching to Source and going back to WYSIWYG.

  For example, the table with a fixed left cell width...

  ```html
  <table class="wikitable table table-striped table-hover">
    <tbody>
      <tr>
        <td class="wikicell" style="width: 123px;">1</td>
        <td class="wikicell">3</td>
      </tr>
    </tbody>
  </table>
  ```

  ...is simply converted to wiki...

  ```markdown
  ||1|3||
  ```

  This issue exists in both Tiki 12 and r65080 trunk.

This is a duplicate of issue #4625, but I marked that one as a duplicate instead.
