Description

When choosing to "edit" an "Item Link" type tracker field, saving will always convert the Item Link type field to a "Relations" tracker field.

The reason for this can be seen - in the "Advanced" part of the edit popup, the only option in the "Field Type" dropdown is "Relations".

I realise that an Item link may just be a kind of relation in the "backend", however the interface for both configuring and using an item link is much better than the relations field, and any paramaters entered in to the item link do not trafer to the new "relations" field.

Tiki 18.01 running on Ubuntu 16.04 LTS

Thanks for reporting.

It's not intentional to force a field type change. The intent was to make it easier if needed. We know that relations and item link each have their strengths and are both needed.
