Description

I have seen twice in the last 2 weeks the same bug pattern involving the Smarty icon function. When the global $iconset variable read by the function is not defined as expected, the function may fallback to $params['_id'] = 'green_question'; even if the name parameter was specified, so a green question mark displays instead of the icon supposed to show.

I have seen this:

1. On tiki.org, following a report on tikiwiki-devel
2. On this show instance, for at least 3 icons (those for the Modules, Permissions and Plugin approval entries of the Quick admin menu)

This persists until the server cache is cleared. I do not know how to reproduce after.

The impact is amplified by improper handling of smarty_function_icon() when it fails to find the requested icon. There should at the minimum be a PHP notice logged, and the question mark image should have a clear label such as "Unknown icon", not "Question".
