-  PluginConvene: Have more options than OK and Not OK

Description

Tested in Firefox on <https://tiki.org/2018-08-TAG-Meeting> - clicking the edit helper icon just opens empty modal instead of showing the PluginConvene options.

Update: on the linked page it is working again. Not sure how it got fixed and when but I have a feeling it was only workarounded by reducing the size (see "Solution" below) of the Convene plugin data in the body. Anyway, setting "Out of date" status and putting it to pending for now...

Solution

Display information that the body of the plugin is too big to be opened in the plugin helper modal or load that data into the modal in a different way than via a GET request.

The error in the JS console is "Request URL too long" because there's so much data in that one, and this can happen for any plugin in theory (although convene is notoriously inefficient) so i think the plugin helper rendering code (lib/core/WikiParser/Parsable.php:148 in trunk) to replace the plugin edit icon with an info one and a tooltip to explain it's too big for the plugin edit helper.

The question is, how big is too big? I reckon 4KB is common for a GET request...

I guess the alternative would be to convert those to a post but that could be quite a lot of work and disruption...
