Description

When a user is registering on a tiki, within the default template, if there is an error, it is no longer obvious that there is an error. The errors use to be highlighted, but now they are black text that looks like field descriptions.

I'm presuming this is a bootstrap 4 issue but could be wrong.

Jorge Sá Pereira 24 Oct 18 03:20 GMT-0000

Hey drsassafras and Gary,

Bootstrap 4 dropped the `has-error` and `label-*` styles, and started to use css pseudo-classes (`:invalid`) but Tiki uses jquery validation and needs to use `'is-invalid'` for (form elements) and `'invalid-feedback'` for error message descriptions.

There are 2 possible variants (using `is-invalid` and `invalid-feedback`):

<https://screenshots.firefox.com/jvMdXztQZdoP1FxF/trunk.tiki.loc>

Or using the same visual as 18.x (with `is-invalid` and the error messages are wrapped in `badge badge-warning`):

<https://screenshots.firefox.com/s6hgH9rNJnegfEfU/trunk.tiki.loc>

IMHO, I do prefer the first option.

What do you think?

drsassafras 24 Oct 18 05:03 GMT-0000

I like the 18.x style. The outlining of the field in red is a nice trick as well!

So, Gary, you're the tie breaker!

Gary Cunningham-Lee 24 Oct 18 10:40 GMT-0000

I like the first version (<https://screenshots.firefox.com/jvMdXztQZdoP1FxF/trunk.tiki.loc>) better because the version with the badge wrapper seems too heavy visually to me. But I kind of wish the first version's text was bold or a little larger, to be more readable. I guess the best choice for me would be something in between the two options, but given the choice, I'd say the text-only, without background.

I prefer the first one too because it is closer to BS4 defaults as shown at <https://getbootstrap.com/docs/4.1/components/forms/#validation>

I agree with you. After that, each theme can make their own style for those classes.

I found out that the same issue is present in tracker items forms validation and schedulers (crontime). I'm trying to fix a bug with 'remote' validation that clears all other 'field errors' (I guess its a async issue).

Jorge Sá Pereira 25 Oct 18 21:59 GMT-0000

Hi all,

I've just fixed the registration form and also included an improvement in trackers items validation (Jonny had fixed the highlight/unhighlight in trackers) but I fixed the error placement and also highlight/unhighlight chosen elements (because sometimes the 'real' element is hidden).

I had an issue with remote validation that was unhighlight all fields with errors, reported here: <https://github.com/jquery-validation/jquery-validation/issues/2150>. And I did include a composer patch to fix tiki's jquery-validation package, because the fix was not yet released in a new version.

Previously, validation was happening on keyUp, now it occurs when field get blur (unfocus). It was causing issues with highlight/unhighlight and also it performs unnecessary requests for incomplete values (while typing).

I did some tests and also included remote server response delays. Please check if you find any issues left.
