Description

Some versions of the Tikiwiki documentation suggest that a watch does not report a change to a web page that has been designated as a "minor" change. That does not appear to be the case for Tikiwiki 1.9.2.

If you ask me, the ability for a wiki user to make a Minor edit without bothering the "Watcher" crowd is a great idea and makes for a better community wiki dynamic.

Solution

Developers pick one:

- The old documentation is "wrong". BTW, I've already fixed the current documentation accordingly.

OR

- The old documentation is "correct" or "describes a very worthwhile specification" and the feature is "broken" or "should be implemented as specified", so fix it, and also conform the current documentation.

There are now 2 different watch events for wiki pages: `wiki_page_changes` and `wiki_page_changes_incl_minor`. As `notificationemalilib` shows:

// If it's a minor change, get only the minor change watches.
```

if( $minor ){
$emails = $notificationlib->get_mail_events('wiki_page_changes_incl_minor', $pageName); // look
for pageName and any page
} else { // else if it's not minor change, get both watch types.
$emails1 = $notificationlib->get_mail_events('wiki_page_changes', $pageName); // look for pageName and any page
for pageName and any page
$emails = array_merge( $emails1, $emails2 );
}

The user should now get the behavior he wants if he uses the right watch event.
