Image galleries cannot be deleted

I posted a question on the forums, but got no answer:
https://tiki.org/forumthread73497-Cannot-delete-image-gallery?topics_offset=9
After some research I found a very old posting by someone who complained about the exact same behaviour on Tiki 3.2 (!):
https://tiki.org/forumthread35020-Cannot-delete-images-from-image-galleries
He also posted a workaround, that is to disable search engine friendly URLs. I tried that, but found that search-engine friendly URLs were already disabled, only option was enabled: tag for canonical (true) URLs. I disabled that too, but it does NOT do the trick. I cannot delete an image gallery I created. Not as the creator of the image gallery, not as admin. The creator has administrative rights to file galleries, admin of course also.

When the image gallery in question is opened, the list of gallery actions is completely empty. On the list of all image galleries, the screwdriver icon only has one option available: Object permissions. All other options are without links, and not link-coloured. There are no specific permissions set, global rights apply. And there all registered users have tiki_p_admin_galleries...

Thanks
Hman

OK, now commenting in the right spot. Sorry that I did not do it in the first place. Is it possible to move those comments here?

Let's get on with this one: There is no filter "deprecated". Filters of the instance are on default values, and that is: "experimental" and "unavailable" are off. Did you mean "unavailable"? I did not have "unavailable" activated on my 18.3, but once image galleries are turned on, the control panel of image galleries becomes visible anyhow.

Ah, sorry, it is not under "Deprecated" in 18.x but "Experimental". Sadly it is not easy to move the comments from wiki page to tracker item without manually tweaking the database.

Well, room for improvement 😊

But why on earth is a feature "experimental" that is more than a decade old? And how could it become broken? I have no clue, but my guess was that another permission could be needed to delete an image gallery, and somehow this is not being displayed for reasons also unknown...
