Description

I created a fairly basic tiki setup using a brand new Tiki 21 instance (aimed to be used in production next week)

I applied the Collaborative_community_12x profile.

When attempting to edit the registered group to remove the homepage, or select anonymous in the inheritance field, I can't save because this errors blocks the process:

Template Group children cannot have permission: Editors

I didn't select anything with editors at that level. Nor I did attempt to do anything with templated groups yet, but I was aiming to change basic options yet.

What's going on? Is this "templated groups" feature ready for production?

How can I disable the templated groups and roles options, in order to avoid their issues with basic behavior and setup of a basic Tiki site not requiring that level of complexity?

It should be optional, shouldn't it?

Reproduced cleanly in a brand new site at show2.t.o (on trunk since 21.x is not available yet at show2.t.o), and it's clearer to me that this is candidate to release blocker: too serious of an issue with a basic setup and expected change by tiki site admins willing to tweak the basic groups to their needs.

Steps to reproduce:

(1) Log in as admin here:

<http://xavi-9794-7325.show2.tikiwiki.org/tiki-admingroups.php?group=Registered>

u: admin

p: 12345

(2) Remove the contents of the homepage field and attempt to save. Error message is triggered.

Solution

Hopefully a77ec7fa fixes it without breaking templated groups?

Hi Xavi

Thanks, but shame you added the blocker category after the 21.0 release, do we need to recall it?

Probably too late, so we'd have to do 21.1 quicky quick if so. I just edited a group and it worked ok. Will try and investigate deeper later...
