Description

It would be really useful to be able to override the smarty templates used for email notifications (currently in `templates/mail` and `templates/activity`)

Probably a new pref `mail_template_wiki_pages` to look for pages "named exactly like the template files" (maybe starting with `mail_?`) with the correct `tiki_p_use_as_template` permission and if found, use that as a tplwiki resource instead of the tpl file.

Hopefully to be backported to 21.x when tested.

This came up as being useful again, let's try and make it happen for 27.0?

Good idea !

About the naming (sorry to hijack []):

Starting with "mail_" mean they will be mixed with other pages that can start with the term "mail". I would like to see a way to put aside some kind of pages from being listed with the "regular" wiki pages.

To illustrate, I name admins pages like this: 00.todo, 00.playground or customSearch_tpl but still they are mixed with the regular pages.

I have no clear idea on how to do that in a way all would like.

Sure, Categories can do that (sitepages, templates, private, mailtemplate, etc) but it require too much work and a lot of end-user teaching/leaning.
