Description
I'm not quite sure whether this should come into the file gallery involved, or into the tracker displaying (products tracker from Tiki cart). When you delete a product image from the file gallery, the tracker will still show the deleted image. Of course that is just a (browser) caching issue. But once you reload (or if you've never had the image in question cached) you only get the browsers missing image (i.e. broken link) icon.

IMHO it would be better to display an automatic image from TikiWiki instead, just like other webshops do it like "no image available", "no image provided for this article" or something in this fashion.

Thanks
hman

Hm, in templates/examples/shop/product_itemp.tpl there is such a fallback already in place, but somehow it fails?
