Description

When you open the orphan pages function, select a page to be deleted and set "delete" as the action for the marked pages, you will be prompted with a dialog that asks whether this page shall be deleted (btw. cf. umbrella bug for missing tra: That dialog is only partially translatable). You are presented with the option to create a 301 redirection. The dialog has two buttons: Close and Delete. If you chose Delete and did not mark the checkbox for the redirect (because you just want to delete) then you get the error message that "no page was selected", although clearly a page had been selected, and in the above mentioned dialog it was displayed, so there can be no mistake that the selection took place...
