Description

Uploading an animated gif image file that shows a bug reproduced is not an easy task in dev.t.o. I had to do that because the record rtc feature is not usable yet, and I wanted to reproduce the issue visually. I did that in an animated gif. I edited the corresponding bug report, and uploaded the gif file through the toolbar icon to "Choose or upload images".

I got the image uploaded (to the default location, I didn't change it, expecting "happy path"), but the wiki syntax automatically inserted seems to not be adapted to displaying gif images.

I recall that any plugin img param that attempts to resize the image converts it to png (or Tiki used to do so years ago), so that I removed the param to make a zoombox, I just left the param to indicate the fileId. But nothing was displayed in the parsed textarea of the tracker item once saved.

Similarly, going to the view file (icon shown from the since last visit module) showed nothing, which might trigger the false sensation that the file upload failed.

But it didn't fail.

If you use the oldish syntax to display the image as an image, then it displays properly, as it can be reproduced here:

Couldn't we get that plugin img when using fileId param to automatically display the gif image as image when the plugin notices that it's a gif image indeed?

Somehow...
