Description
   You can use Tiki articles in multilingual website having article for several language.
   The usual process is to create a main article (default language) then create other articles with different language and assign them as translation of the previous article.
   Article => Edit => Advanced, Attach existing article ID as translation

   You have to insert the ID of the article and that really not user friendly.

   You should be able to retrieve articles by name in a select.

   On second thought...

   If wed really like to improve we could reuse the same interface/system we have with wiki pages (translation) as it is working fine is much better (proposing translation if missing and displaying set of translated documents) and will be better for UX (consistency).
   I just wonder if it worth the investment.
