Description

Hello, especially the Admin UI revamp team.

I love the new Tiki Admin UI, whilst I am quite massively missing a few nice ideas of our old one. When I supported the idea of a more WP-like approach, I never thought we would lose the old feature tiles panel, which has a lot of advantages in respect of time saving.

I suggest, that we could put it into a module and then add it to the list of standard admin modules, that can be optionally loaded into the admin dashboard.

Aswell there are a number of administration places, where the new admin dashboard style is not yet applied. I assume that is just a matter of time and ressources.

Comments welcome.

Best regards,
Torsten

I agree. The feature tiles panel does not need to be the entry point but it's a very efficient way of seeing what's on/off and go configure stuff.

It's not perfect but keeping it available will totally help during transitioning to finding things in menus.
