Description

When you rollover any of the phplayers horiz menu, causing the menu to popup, and then subsequently try to use an overlib, e.g. the userlink popup that appears when you rollover the name of a user, the overlib will fail with javascript error "windowWidth is not a function".

The reason is because phplayers layersmenu.js (or if you have copied its contents into another file like layersmeny-header.ijs) defines windowWidth as it works, destroying the overlib function.

Solution

The reason is because phplayers layersmenu.js (or if you have copied its contents into another file like layersmeny-header.ijs) defines windowWidth as it works, destroying the overlib function.

Possible solution is to rename windowWidth variable in phplayers wherever it is used to avoid conflict.

-- update: I think the best solution is to change all windowWidth references and calls in overLIB to olWindowWidth. However, this is a case of 2 external libraries clashing with each other. I have written to the author of overLIB to suggest he include this change in his next version. Keep watch for it.

Hi Nelson!

Please try to find and commit a solution. Please try to avoid modifying external libs such as phplayers to keep upgrade simple in the future.

Thanks!

M ;-)
