Description

Sometimes, we want to change a few language strings from the original Tiki. It could be because of regional or community expressions.

Currently, we need to change language.php and/or the template (tpl) files.

It would be better to have a custom language file which would override default text. (Like we do for tpl files). Therefore upgrades would be smoother.

Even better if we could edit this language file via the GUI.

Solution

Introduced in Tiki 1.9.8

- exactly. the content of this file has to look like:

□□□□□□□□

<?php $lang['string in english to translate'] = "string translated in language"; ?>

(with one line per translation)

those translations can be new strings that you introduced in templates, or existing ones, in which case the custom.php declaration will override the default language.php one.

cheers,
mose

I prefer to do like this
At the end on lang/xx/language.php

□□□□□□

require_once('lang/xx/language_mine.php');
And create a lang/xx/language_mine.php with

□□□□□□

```
<?php $lang_mine= array( "Mine" => "mine version", ); $lang = array_merge($lang, $lang_mine); ?>

This is all nicely handled in recent versions of Tiki. See i18n.tiki.org current custom.php has different string format than language.php... not good

Even better would be web admin interface and saving in the DB...
