Description

If you enable "Offer to save passwords" and save your Tiki login and password on <https://wikisuite.chat>, each time you reload a page with converse.js in a popup e.g. on <https://wikisuite.chat/About> or <https://wikisuite.chat/P%C3%A0d%C3%A9> Chrome pops up a blocking dialog saying "Sign in as (your username)" and then scrolls you to the bottom of the page, which is really quite annoying. It seems fine on the home page where converse.js is embedded in the page.

It also doesn't seem to happen on <https://conversejs.org> after the first page load, so seems to be specific to the Tiki implementation.

Some possible clues here:

- <https://stackoverflow.com/q/15484533>
- <https://stackoverflow.com/a/28579696>
- <https://stackoverflow.com/q/15484533>

Maybe?

I seems to happen on line 27 of `lib/xmpp/js/conversejs-tiki-oauth.js` so one way round it would be to not use oauth to log in...
